Аннотация:

The article analyzes the current state of Russian export markets of agricultural products, the impact that export and import have on the economic situation due to the introduction of import substitution and the food embargo in Russia introduced in response. The article states that the sanction regime caused a controversial impact on agricultural industry. On the one hand, the sanctions have had quite a negative impact on the export and import of dairy and meat products to the Russian Federation in the form of an increase in the procurement prices of milk, prices of milk producers, wholesalers, increasing production costs, model changes and priorities of consumer behavior. On the other hand, the sanctions allowed Russian producers to successfully occupy vacant niches and open up possibilities for accelerating the process of import substitution in Russia, provide a unique chance to gain a deserved place on the world market, increasing its effectiveness. © 2018.
