Аннотация:

The relevance of the study is conditioned by the fact that in recent decades the problem of preventing psychological violence among university students has become urgent one. Authoritarianism and a tendency to dominate as socio-psychological phenomena are factors that contribute to increasing the propensity to psychological violence in interpersonal communication, which actualizes their study. This paper is aimed at analyzing the relationship between authoritarian behavior and the tendency to dominate and control in interpersonal communication among university students. The paper presents the results of an empirical study of the prevalence and interconnection of authoritarianism and the propensity to dominate among university students in the educational environment. It is established that the most common among university students are such features of an authoritarian personality as authoritarian aggression and authoritarian submission. The propensity to domination is associated with such manifestations of authoritarianism as conservatism, authoritarian aggression, anti- interception, destructiveness and cynicism, authority complex and stereotypy. © 2018
