Аннотация:

Small and medium business constitutes not only the economic basis of a state but creates additional jobs, providing employment of the population, which leads to the necessity for development of a system of measures for state support of entrepreneurship, which is very important for further development of the state and creates scientific interest to this problem. The purpose of this research is to study the forms and method of support for small and medium entrepreneurship in the RF and to evaluate their effectiveness. The authors use the economic & statistical means of the research, as well as economic and comparative analysis. The research and practical developments are based on the following approaches: complex and structural & logical, the methods of comparison and modeling. The authors determine the top-priority directions for further development of small and medium entrepreneurship by means of such tools as development of public-private partnership, which raises the trust of business to the state; expansion of venture business, provision of the system of subsidies to small innovational companies, increase of information access of the system of state support and guarantees. The given recommendations could be used during solving the issues related to increase of the effectiveness of the methods for state support for small and medium business. © 2018. revistaESPACIOS.com.
